Farloft is a well traveled dragon originally from a clan in the far west on the continent of what the humans call North Trairidon. He had a gentle upbringing with loving parents and several siblings. He spent his youngling years traveling the four known continents of man and the five 'unexplored' continents of his world.

In his later years he formed a friendship with the rulers and people who live in The Kingdom of the Last Dragons, in the village of Brownbriar at the foot of the Westridge. Over several centuries he fought alongside his human friends to help preserve their freedom.

He makes his home with his mate and younglings in a lair within the bowels of a semi-dormant volcano.

He is old of age, but young at heart and very, very wise. Due to his extensive travel and interaction with a plethora of diverse creatures over the years he is an extraordinary storyteller and makes a delightful addition to any gathering.
